10. BOARD CONFIDENTIALITY POLICY

INTRODUCTION

Board confidentiality is important. It encourages open and frank discussion at meetings, helps facilitate the development of vision and the implementation of an effective strategy to achieve that vision, and protects information that is confidential, personal, or relates to employment, commercial or legal matters.

PURPOSE

The purpose of this policy is to facilitate effective governance of the Raglan SLSC by ensuring Board confidentiality.

POLICY

Board members must keep confidential all information pertaining to matters dealt with by the Board. This includes board meeting minutes, agendas, contact details, reports to the Board and associated documents, and information contained in those documents.

The obligation to maintain confidentiality continues to apply even after a person has left the Board.

Maintaining confidentiality as a general rule will also help ensure observance by Board members of the following legal duty:

A person who obtains information because they are, or have been, a member of the Board must not improperly use the information to:

- Gain an advantage for themselves or someone else; or
- Cause detriment to the organization.

If a request is made for access to one or more Board Papers*, the Board may on a case-by-case basis resolve to provide access to the document/s. In considering this request, the Board will have regard to:

- The importance of maintaining confidentiality to facilitate effective board meetings.
- The importance of complying with the law – including privacy law – and recognizing that the law sometimes creates duties to disclose or protect information.
- Whether the person requesting the document is a member, and the important role of members in holding the Board accountable; and
- The need to be consistent in the way that documents are treated, and the consequence of establishing any precedents or expectations.

Nothing in this policy is intended to prevent the Board from seeking confidential legal, accounting, financial or other expert advice from independent professionals to assist the Board in carrying out its functions.

Any person who is not a member of the Board but is present at a Board meeting (or part of a meeting) must maintain in confidence all information obtained because of their participation in the meeting.

Board Papers means all written communications to Board member/s including without limitation monthly/quarterly board papers, submissions, minutes, letters, memoranda, Board committee and subcommittee papers and copies of other documents referred to in any of the above mentioned documents made available to the Board members as a Board member during his or her time in office.

RESPONSIBILITIES

The Chairperson is responsible for bringing this policy to the attention of prospective Board members.

The Club Administrator must ensure that it is included in the induction kit (if such a kit exists) for new Board members.

Requests for access to Board Papers should be made to the Club Administrator who should include consideration of the request as an item on the Board agenda.

PROCEDURES

The Club Administrator shall ensure that Board Papers are created, maintained and distributed in a manner which is consistent with their confidential status. They shall be kept separately from other (non-confidential) documents and stored in a manner which limits access to them by unauthorized persons (including employees).

In the circumstances where a request for access to Board Papers has been made, and there is reason to believe that there are laws governing the disclosure or non-disclosure of the document, the Chairperson will obtain legal advice on the matter to assist the Board in its consideration of the request.

NOTE: The policy was adapted from a resource produced by the Institute of Community Directors, Australia.

11. Conflict of Interest/Pānga Rongorua

17 Board of Director Duties

The New Zealand Companies Act 1993 (Companies Law) sets out a director's duties. As a director of a company in New Zealand, you must as a minimum:

- act in good faith and in the best interests of the company;
- exercise due care, diligence and skill that a reasonable director would exercise in the same circumstances;
- exercise powers for a proper purpose;
- comply with the Companies Law and with the company's constitutions;
- not engage in reckless trading; and
- avoid incurring obligations unless satisfied that the company will be able to honour them when required to do so.

Acting in Good Faith

When you exercise your powers or perform your duties as a director of a company in New Zealand, you must ensure that:

- you act in good faith; and
- in what you believe is the best interests of the company.

This means that you should avoid acts that promote your own interests at the expense of the company.

There are certain limited exceptions to this duty. For example:

- directors of wholly-owned subsidiaries may act in a way that they believe is in the best interests of the holding company, even if that is not the case; and
- directors of a company that is carrying out a joint venture between the shareholders, may act in a manner that they believe is in the best interests of a shareholder (or shareholders), even if that is not the case.

However, these exceptions will only apply if they are expressly permitted by the company's constitution.

Due Care, Diligence and Skill

When exercising your powers or performing your duties as a director of a New Zealand company, you must exercise the care, diligence and skill that a reasonable director would exercise in the same circumstances. In doing so, you must take into account the:

- nature of the company;
- nature of the decision;
- position of the director; and
- nature of the responsibilities that you undertake.

This is an objective test of how the reasonable director in the same circumstances would act. You should make sure that you understand the business and the financial statements and you should always exercise informed independent judgment. You should not rely on the other company directors to inform you.

Conflicts of Interest

When do conflicts of interest arise?

A conflict of interest can arise when:

- an officer could benefit financially or otherwise from the charity, either directly or indirectly through someone they are connected to, or
- when an officer's duty to the charity competes with a duty or loyalty they have to another organisation or person.

This includes any situation where it could be perceived that an officer's personal interest or loyalties could affect their decision making.

Conflicts of interest commonly arise in situations where:

- the governing groups' decision could lead to employment for an officer or a member of their family
- an officer stands to gain financially from business dealings, programmes or services provided to the charity, or
- information provided to the governing group in confidence might give an advantage to an officer's business.

How do we manage conflicts of interest?

There are a few steps you can take to make sure conflicts of interest don't affect the decision making.

1. Declare any interests at the first board meeting after the AGM, Declare any interests if they arise during the season with new business.
2. Ensure the officer with the conflict does not participate in the discussion or decision-making process.
3. Record details of the discussions and decisions made in the minutes and a conflict register.
4. Significant transactions with a conflict of interest should be reported in the end of year financial statements as a related party transaction. This is a requirement of the reporting standards for registered charities.

When a conflict of interest is serious, it may be best to resolve the conflict by:

- not pursuing the course of action
- proceeding in a different way so that the conflict of interest does not arise
- appointing further independent officers (if this is applicable), or
- not appointing a particular officer or requesting the officer to resign from the position.

Check to see if your charity has a Conflict of interest clause in its rules (governing document, deed or constitution) and/or policies. It is good practice to have a conflict-of-interest clause in the rules and a conflict of interest policy, as they provide guidance to officers about how to identify and disclose conflicts of interest. You can use the Example conflict of interest policy to help your charity develop a policy.

Examples of conflict of interest

Employing a member of family

Jane is a member of a charity's governing group. There is a vacancy at the charity for an administrator and Jane's son has expressed an interest in applying for the position.

Jane has an interest in her son getting the job he wants but must also act in the best interest of the charity. Therefore, there is a conflict of interest.

Jane should advise the board of the situation and should not be involved in the decisions regarding filling the position.

Receiving donations and making payments to a trustee's business

Nikau is a trustee of a small charity set up to help kids with reading. Nikau is also the owner of a children's bookstore, which donates some books to the charity and gives discounted rates on other books.

Payments and donations between the charity and the bookstore will create a conflict of interest as Nikau has an interest in both.

Nikau should make sure other trustees are aware that he owns the bookstore and should not be involved in any decisions to purchase books from his store. The charity will also need to record the transactions and donations between the charity and bookstore as a related party transaction in their end of year financial reporting.

Paying officers, a salary when officers are related

A brother and sister have set up a charity and are the only officers. They will be undertaking a significant amount of work and intend to pay themselves a salary.

The brother has an interest in getting paid and an interest in his sister getting paid. However, he must also act in the best interest of the charity. This creates a conflict of interest.

The brother and sister must not be involved in the decision making about any payments to themselves or to each other.

Independent officers should be appointed to make the decision about salaries and the salaries must be market value or lower.

Example conflict of interest policy

The purpose of this conflict-of-interest policy is to ensure:

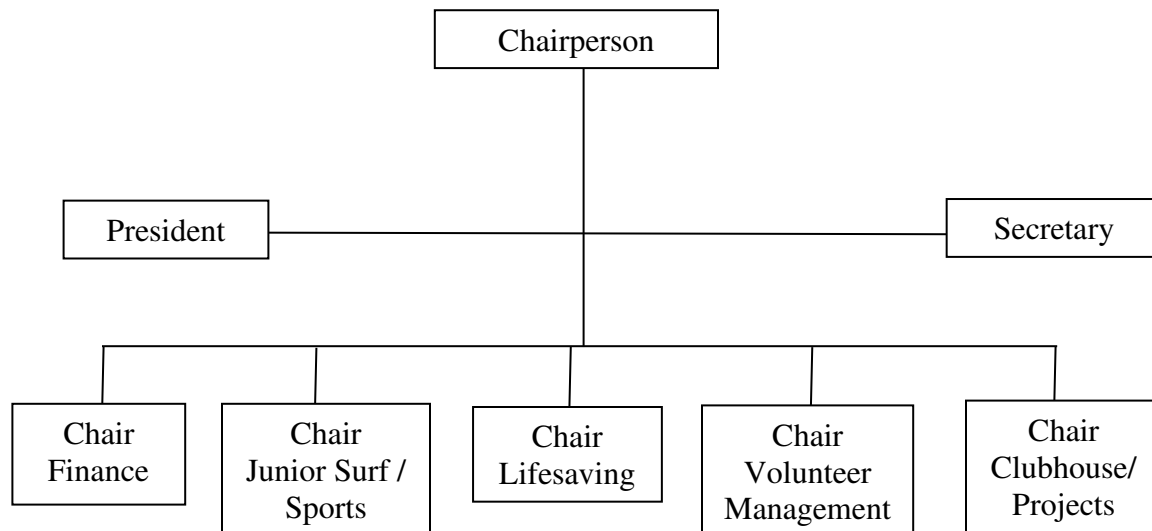

- decisions made are in the best interest of the charity when contemplating entering into a transaction, contract or arrangement that might benefit the private or personal interests of members of the governing group
- the governing group acts at all times in the best interest of the charity
- officers do not directly or indirectly receive and profit from his or her position
- any financial interest is disclosed, and
- officers do not use their position to obtain information to achieve financial benefit for themselves or another close family member, friend, or for another organisation. Family includes anyone related by blood, marriage or domestic partnership.

These procedures will be followed to ensure decisions are made in the best interest of the charity.

1. An interest register will be regularly maintained and monitored where officers will register any perceived, current or potential interests. The interest register will include information about:
 - the officer affected
 - the type of conflict of interest, and
 - how it will be ensured that decisions are made in the charity's best interest.
2. At the beginning of every governing group meeting, conflicts of interest will be declared that relate to the agenda items for discussion.
3. When there is a conflict of interest, the affected officer will not take part in the discussion or decision making.
4. The minutes of meetings will record all disclosures and declarations of conflict of interest. This should include:
 - the type of conflict of interest
 - the officer affected
 - whether the conflict of interest was declared in advance (new conflicts of interest will be added to the conflict-of-interest register)
 - a summary of the discussion, and
 - how it was ensured that decisions were made in the charity's best interest, including anyone that withdrew from the discussion and decision making.
